JAKE SHARP IN COURT. HOT STEAM AND WATER

He Totters in and Vainly Endeavors to Arouse Himself. New York, June 27 .- Jacob Sharp tottered into the court this morning, looking weird and worn, with hardly a vestige of color in his wrinkled and woebegone face. The reason for this was that he had passed a terrible night, not even getting as much sleep as was his lot Saturday night. Mrs. Sharp, who had been privileged to remain with him, had been assiduous in her attentions to her sick husband, and had not rested one moment during the night.

and had not rested one moment during the night.

With the beginning of the reading by Mr. McCall; of his testimony before the senate investigating committee, he opened his lustreless eyes and attempted to interest himself in the proceedings. The first business of the session was to again adjourn the June over and terminer to Monday July 11th, after which Harrison D. Kerr, one of the seventh avenue directors, was called as a witness for the prosecution, but he failing to respond, the senate stenographer Carroll was recalled to the stand, while balance of testimony of Sharp before senate committee or so much thereof as prosecution desired was read, by the assistant district attorney.

Mr. Nicoli finished the reading of the testimony at 1417, and rested one case for the people. Ex-Alderman Fullgraff came into court, and had a short private conference with Peter Mitchell, of comusel for the defense. He then hurried out, closely followed by the district attorney, who acted as though he was fearful that the state's best witness was going to turn traitor, and he must do something to prevent it. Ten minutes' rest was taken after the prosecution closed, after which Mr. Parsons arose and commenced the opening address in behalf of the defense.

prosecution closed, after which Mr. Parsons arose and commenced the opening address in behalf of the defense.

Parsons said that the duty had fallen upon him to open for the defense, but before he proceeded to do so he had two motions to make that he desired to appear on the records, First, to ask the prosecution to elect whether it would stand upon that part of the indictment charging agreement to bribe Fullgraff, or upon that part alleging that he was in fact bribed by Sharp.

The motion was denied.

The second motion was that the court advise the jury to acquit the defendant, as the case now stands under section 410 of the Code of Criminal Proceedure.

Criminal Proceedure.

This motion was also denied and exception taken.

Parsons spoke five hours, not including the time taken for recess. He concluded with an appeal to the jury not to be influenced by anything but the evidence in determining their verdict. During the intermission, after Parsons's address, Dr. Loomis examined Sharp in one of the auterooms. He pronounced Sharp a very sick man. The taking of testimony for defense then began.

THE "BOODLE" CASES.

They Insist Upon All the Cases Being Tried at Once.

at Once.

Chicago, June 27.—The big "boodle" cases came up this morning before Judge Tuley, and by request of defense a change of venue to Judge Jamison's court was granted. When the attorneys went before Jamison the defense demanded trial at once upon all the remaining conspiracy cases. The court refused, and said that only case 1638, which was then before him, would be heard. A bill of particulars was at once presented by Grimnell, and the attorneys for the defense obtained continuance until tomorrow morning, to have time to look it over. The announcement by Grimnell this until tomorrow morning, to have time to look it over. The amouncement by Grinnell this morning that F. W. Bipper, meat contractor, will not be tried with the other defendants in the big boodle indictment, is the first intimation he has allowed to be given that Bipper has turned state's evidence. He was given an opportunity to give his testimony very early in the investigation, but for a long time he resolutely insisted that he knew of no wrongdoing, and therefore had no evidence to give. Bipper was one of the oldest contractors doing business with the county. Years ago, when he got his first contract, he had only one little meat shop, near Twenty-second street, on State, but year by year, as his county bill grew larger, his loop grew also, and now his market is one of the street of the city.

The land bill will come up in the mouse of commons today.

In the debate last night, Mr. Chaner moved several new clauses to the crimes bill, dealing with legal procedure, all of which were rejected by large majorities.

The Daily News says this morning that the waste of time on some of Mr. Chaner's proposals was unreasonable, while other of his proposals might be usefully debated in the form of a separate bill, which, however, the government could not be expected to accept.

Mr. Smith announced in the house of commons this afternoon, that the government intended to proceed with the crimes bill until it passed the report stage.

Mr. Robertson, (liberal), moved that a new clause be added to the bill providing that the act could be repealed by an order in council. This, he said, would prevent the house of fords from keeping the act on the statute book in defiance, possibly, of the wishes of the house of commons.

Mr. Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, opposed the new clause, urging that the control of the house of commons was carefully preserved in the bill, and that any ministry could prevent its operation. The proposed could prevent its operation. The proposed clause was rejected.

Mr. Morley moved that the duration of the act be limited to three years. It was the first time, he said, that any government had the shameful courage to propose perpetual coercion. In any exceptional mutilation of civil rights, particularly in so grave and serious a mutilation as the present bill contemplated, the government ought to be compelled, from time to time, at tolerable short intervals, to examine whether the circumstances still justified the existence of such exceptional legislation. This was the first government that cast to the winds the old-fashioned regard for the liberty of the subject and the doctrine that exceptional legislation should not last one day longer than the circumstances demanded. The bill turned into offenses acts which were not longer than the circumstances demanded. The bill turned into offenses acts which were not now considered offenses. He quoted the returns of agrarian crime and urged that the figures showed that there was the smallest possible necessity for the bill.

Sir R. E. Webster, attorney general, opposed Mr. Morley's motion. He said that, although it was true that previous bills were of restricted duration, no previous measure had contained the same safeguards and the same power of parliamentary revision as were embraced in the present bill. There had been working in Ireland forces closely connected with murder of the worst character. These forces had been supported, not by the internal resources of Iresupported, not by the internal resources of Ireland, but by large contributions of money from another country. The government must retain the power of judging when these forces were at work.

Mr. Gladstone urged that the special character of the bill was the reason for limiting its duration. Its enactment as a permanent measure would aggravate existing evils and intensify that alienation and estrangement from law wherein lay the fundamental evil of Ireland's social condition. The list of precedents, unusually long and authoritative, justifies opposition to bills of a general character which places legislative power in the hands of the places legislative power in the hands of the executive. The invariable rule had been to limit the duration of such laws. The present bill created new crimes, and the government was handing over the people's rights to be dealt with, silently and secretly, at the discretion of the lord lieutenant of Ireland.

Mr. Balfour said that the precedents showed that temporary bills were fallacious. Experience demanded the adoption of permanent measures.

Sir Milford Lawson, radical, supporting the amendment, said it was an honor to America to send money to those who were fighting for the freedom of Ireland.

Mr. Redmond also spoke in support of the amendment of the support of the suppo

They Agree Upon a Bill for the Protection of Their Interests.

Waycross, Ga., June 27.—[Special.]—The committee appointed by the Naval Store Mannatacturers Protective association, at its last meeting in Jesup, on April 14th, met in Waycross today for the purpose of framing a bill to be introduced in the next session of the legislature, regulating the inspection and sale of naval steres in the state of Georgia. There were present Hon. L. Johnson, of Graham; Hon. J. L. Hand, of Pelham; Colonel John E. Donaldson, of Bainbridge; Mr. Joseph Baker, of Alapaha, and Mr. A. P. Brantley, so Blackshear. Hon. W. G. Brantley, senator from the third district, and your correspondent were present by invitation of the committee. The mooting was very harmonious and the essence of the proposed bill agreed upon. It will be given the public in a few days. It is thought the bill will harmonize all difference among independent and free-thinking producers, and will meet the approbatian of all consumers, and that it can work no injury to any ligitimate business connected with the trade, but on the contrary, will bring about higher commercial relations between producer and consumer and materially increase the prosperity of the trade in naval stores.

CURIOUS JUNE WEATHER

The Weather So Cool That People Find Com-

They who have been accustomed to praise to the skies the equable climate of Atlanta will be compelled to change their tune if many more of these climate freaks occur. Soon Atlanta's climate will get the reputation of being as variable and capricious as a coquette.

Last Sunday the weather was warm and sunshiny, and sultry. Until near midnight it continued close and disagreeable. About one o'clock Monday morning, however, a change occurred. A fresh, cool breeze sprang up from the east. This breeze has been blowing eyer since. up from the east. This breeze has been blowing ever since.

Early yesterday morning mercury in thermometers registered about 65 degrees, and during the warmest part of the day it did not rise above the seventies. Last night it became cooler, and the temperature actually got chilly. It was so cool that persons who were compelled to remain outdoors late put on their overcoats. It is certainly a novel spectacle to see people wearing overcoats in the latter part of June.

Many Atlanta, people who contemplated part of June.

Many Atlanta people who contemplated visiting the mountains or the seashore to get cool have decided to stay at home. Atlanta is rapidly achieving a reputation as a summer sesort. It is much cooler here than at any other southern city.

Generally the last week in June is the hot test part of the summer.

Four years ago the 27th of June was one of the hottest days ever known here, the mercury in thermometers going as high as 100 degrees. But many persons well versed in the science of meteorology declare that the seasons

Detroit, June 27.—This afternoon New York and Detroit had played two innings, the result being two to nothing in favor of the home team. In the third inning Gore was taken sick, and the visitors endeavored to retire him in favor of Brown, who was to be used to catch Tiernan. The Deuons-claimed that the rules required that the player should be injured before such a move was admissi-ble, and Umpire Valentine sustained their objection, although New York claimed the right and expressed was to be used to catch Tiernan. The Detroits willingness to play with eight men. The "Giants" appearing to insist on playing Brown, and not coming to time in the required time, the game was called nine to nothing in favor of Detroit.

called nine to nothing in favor of Detroit.

As so little of the game had been played, the local management secured the consent of Manager Multree to play another championship game in the time yet remaining, not wishing to disappoint the crowd. No extra admission was charged, although the visitors were paid the full sum they would have received for a game at another time. This second game was won by the New Yorks with ease in seven and a half innings, when darkness stopped the play. Score:

was twelve days, sixteen hours and fifty-five minutes.

Glasgow, June 27.—The match race between the yachts Thistle and Irex was sailed today over the Northern Yacht club course. The Thistle took the lead at the start, and at the end of twenty miles was three and a half minutes ahead of her opponent.
The Irex was allowed seven minutes and three seconds on ful course, which is fifty miles long. The Thistle won, covering the course in four hours, nine minutes and forty seconds, the Irex's time being four hours, seventeen minutes and forty-six seconds. The Thistle saved her time allowed the Irex and won by one minute and three seconds. The wind was strong during the entire contest.
Captain Barr, commander of the Thistle, being interviewed after today's contest, said he regarded the race as the best test the Thistle, had yet undergone. There was a good breeze, he said, and the course was such as to enable both yachts to show their ability in running, reaching and beating about.
Experts declare that the Irex was much more smartly handled today than even the Thistle, although the latter had a better crew. The level lost a spinner during the last run, but it was replaced in three minutes. The Thistle has gone to Dumoon near Greenock.

New London, Conn., June 27.—The eighth annual four-mile straight-away race between an eight-oared crew representing Harvard and Columbia college was rowed this afternoon on the Thames course from Gales Ferry to Winthrop Foint and proved to be one of the most hotly confested races ever rowed, both crews breaking the record of twenty minutes and thirty-one seconds made by Yale in 1884. The official time is Harvard 20, 21.

All the conditions were favorable for fast time, which was comparatively smooth and the tide wavery strong, being greatly increased in volume by the heavy freshet occasioned by the late rains and a fresh breeze blew directly down the course. The Four-Mile Yacht Rac

The Buena Vista Argus says that Dan, the haif-witted negro who lives at Mrs. Hollis's, was bitten by a snake several days ago. This happened at the mill, and several negroes, taking in the situation, corded Dan's leg tightly and sent him home, where antidotes could be given. Thieves again entered the Episcopal church in Americus, on Friday night, by breaking out several panes of glass and raising one of the windows. All of the keys to both the inner and outer doors were carried off, but nothing else, so far as is known, was molested, although two handsome solid silver waiters were upon the organ at the time. It is thought by some that the object of the thief or thieves is to secure the keys and make the church a sleeping place at night. The church was entered in the same way a short while since and the keys carried off, as in this instance.

Monday, Sheriff Marshall, of Dawson, received a telegram from the marshal of Shellman, to arrest Paul Price for murder. Price is a railroad hand, and the sheriff found him between Duwson and Shellman, with the gang. He was placed in jail and an officer went up Tuesday night and took him to Cuthbert. Price was on the cannon-ball train Sunday night, coming to Dawson, and when it stopped at Shellman he stepped out upon the platform and discharged his pistol, the ball taking effect in a negro man near by, and killing him almost instantly. The prisoner claims that he did not know any one was in the direction in which he shot, it being dark, and that the killing was purely accidental.

Waycross Reporter: Some time since a young fellow of Waycross was very much grieved at the way his girl treated him. They were to take a drive one afternoon, and our friend was on hand with the best turnout he could secure. Just before getting into the buggy, however, the manner of his girl changed from that of kindness and affection to icy-coldness, and positively refused to accompany the young man. As she made no explanation of her strange actions, he was non-plussed and can't understand it yet. But we have got into the secret at last and are prepared to tell him. He had, accidentally or otherwise, allowed a red hair to blow on to his coat and cling there. His girl's hair is black, and you know how the dear girls are about such things. Now, maybe if he can explain how that troublesome red hair came to be on his coat, they will make up and peace will again reign in Warsaw.

A PRETTY WAR STORY.

How a Confederate Girl Came to Marry Federal Adjutant.

Federal Adjutant.
From the New York Evening Post.
When the federals captured the little town of —, in Mississippl, they took Judge Strong's house for the headquarters. The old judge was mad. He decided at once to go into exile.
He borrowed his own carriage and horses to convey him and his family to the river bank, where they would take skiffs.

vey him and his family to the river bank, where they would take skiffs.

It looked a trifle like a funeral procession as the women, veiled and weeping, filed solemnly down the steps and took their places in the waiting carriage. The judge followed them in unsmiling dignity. They were going into exile.

Their borrowed driver slammed the carriage door upon them and mounted to the box with a solemn "Git up" to his horses. Some one halted him from the interior of the house. The hurried step of a the interior of the house. The hurried step of a spurred boot along the big central hall, and then, standing there with bared head before them, was the young officer upon whose unwilling hands the odium of this ejectment had been thrust. With a odium of this ejectment had been thrust. With a quick military salute to the veiled women, he turned his troubled eyes upon the judge, sitting sternly erect upon the front seat. He held in one hand a bird cage, in the other a basket of blooming hyacinths torn up by the roots. He knew they all hated him, and it was hard to say what he wanted just then to say to them. The hot blood mounted high up to the white temples that were in such sharp contrast to his sun burned checks. He stammered out his errand presently awkwardly enough. "I brought rand presently awkwardly enough. "I brought these thinking the ladies might want to set them out somewhere eise," indicating the hyacinths

"Present them to the general in command with my respects," said the judge's wife in her most pa-triotic tones, "and tell him, if there is anything more we can surrender for his comfort, we hope he will not be too modest to indicate it.

'and this''-the bird cage-''supposing it had been

"Oh, mamma, that is cruel." A girl's veil was thrown back and a pair of little hands were held out for the hyacinths. "It was good of you to think of this. The bird would be in our way. It's mine. I give it to you. These I will take, thank you." Then they were gone, and he had nothing but a memory left, and a very inconvenient piece of army baggage on hand. But never was bird or beast better cared for than the useless little yellow warbler.

At the end of the war the family returned. The condition in which they found the premises was a matter of more amazement to the Strongs than it had been to their neighbors. There was not one sign left of the enemy's occupation but the grassy elts on the lawn and the free sweep of exposure to the public road, which at first was a sore trial to the nerves of the whole family. The judge made it his business at once to begin sifting the mystery of this unfathered beneficence to him and his. A little bird ave him the right clue.

They had been settled in the old house but a few days when two enormous tubs, each containing a thrifty rose-bush, and a glittering gilt Chinese pagoda of a bird's cage, containing a useless little yellow warblet, were added to their effects. These were dumped abruptly down upon the portico with no message of any sort. A tag was fastened to each rose-bush, on which was written: "Survival of the fittest." The bird gave them the clue.

"Why did you do all this for me?" the judge asked, sitting face to face with the new lawyer, whom he had unearthed as his benefactor.

"I don't know that I did do it for you," the ex-ad-jutant said, his eyes wandering from force of habit to where the bird's cage had swung and the rose trees had bloomed behind the little office. "For whom then?"

"For your daughter—the one that lifted her viel and remembered to be kind and just to her enemy, even in the sharp hours of her own misery. God does not make such a woman as that every day, and some of these days, when the soreness has worn it-selt out of her heart and yours, I mean to ask her to be my wife. Not yet though, I bide my time.'

out of everybody's heart before the day when that strolling photographer sprung his camera on the old Strong house, when the family were all grouped on the stuccood steps, for among the blurry forms on the steps is the ex-adjutant's. Public Schools in Covington.

Covington, Ga., June 27.—[Special.]—The question of establishing by local taxation a public school for our city is being agitated at this time, and a meeting of the citizens was held today to consider the matter. As the establishment of the school will largely depend on the question as to whether or not the city can secure the use of the buildings of the Georgia Methodist Female college, the only action taken today was to appoint a committee action taken today was to appoint a committee to confer with the trustees of that institution to confer with the trustees of that institution with a view to ascertaining whether the North Georgia conference (which controls the institution) would grant to the city the use of the college buildings in the event that a public school should be established. It seems that a large majority of our citizens favor the establishment of the sbhool.

Macon, Ga., June 17 .- [Special.]-On Saturday last the interesting case, in commercial law, of Lee Schlessinger, vs. T. C. Atline & Co., was argued before Judge Speer in the United States court. The court reserved its decision till Wednesday. The case hinged on the negotiability of a promissory note, and in his decision rendered today, Judge Speer held that although the note contained in it a clause waiving all right of homestead and exemption, and also a promise to pay ten per cent. attorney's fees, it was negotiable by the mer-chant. The authorities were very conflicting upon this point, and were very clearly pre-sented by Messrs. Hill and Harris for the plaintiff, and Dessau and Bartlett for the de-

John W. Parker, who has been demoralizing Cracker's Neck, Jasper county, with his stilling operations, was up for carrying on an illicit distillery. The judge, after hearing all the evidence decided that Parker was guilty, and entenced him to six months imprisonment in Bibb county jail. The last time the judge tried him he was district attorney on the northern circuit.

In sentencing Parker, Judge Speer said John Parker, you are an old violator of the internated revenue laws. This presiding judge, when district attorney of the northern district of Georgia, remembers you very well, and many a time has the witnesses testified that they got their liquor from John Parker's distillery. You have been before the court here on another occasion. It seems that your witnesses testified that they got their liquor from John Parker's distillery. You have been before the court here on another occasion. It seems that your still was captured by the revenue officers and carried off, but you restored your distillery, like the fabled Phenix of old rises from its ashes. That Phenix-like capacity of your still has a very injurious effect on society. You have done a great deal of harm in that part of Jasper county, on the border of Newton, called "Cracker Neek" settlement, and given a bad name to the whole county, which the county does not deserve, and nearly every case of the violation of the revenue laws from that county comes from the "cracker neck," and a great many of them can be traced to the distillery over which you have presided. The court takes no pleasure in reminding you of these facts, but calls your attention to them as a justification, at least to you, for the court does not find it necessary to justify its action to canybody else, as to what will presently follow, and to understand why it is that youiwill have a much more jevere sontence than the other people who come before this court for violations of the internal revenue laws. We have tried to be very lenient, and when others have been suspended, and they have been discharged with the hope they would be induced to abandon their course of life, but you, John W. Parker, do not deserve that elemency. You and your partners in crime have demoralized and given a bad name to what otherwise would be a respectable section of the country, and I feel that you should be made an example of, and it is adjudged by the court that you be imprisoned in the Bibb county jail for the full term of six months and pay a fine or $200 and be thenee discharged.

The Subject Being Discussed on All Sides in Macon.

Macon, Ga., June 27.—[Special.]—The subject of extending the city limits so as to take in the subrubs, is the topic of discussion on the streets today. While there is a good deal of opposition, yet, the vast majority of the outsiders are clearly in favor of coming in under an equitable basis.

The principal points to be agreed upon, are the adjustment of taxes, so that the new comers, with sparsely settled communities, and comparatively small taxable properties, outside of their homes, may not be forced to assume the heavy burdens now resting on the city. There is no doubt but this can be amicably arranged.

Superintendent Voss' Energetic Enterprise in Road Building.

Macon, Ga., June 27.—[Special.]—Owing to the unfailing energy of Superintendent Voss, of the Macon Street Railway company, the cars are now running regularly on the Second street line, as far as the new brick church (colorod,) on Oglethorpe street. Mr. Voss has wrought wonders in this enterprise during the last twelve months. He has built and equipped the East Macon and Gilesville line, a length of three miles and a half, and by Saturday night he will have the Second street line through from the confederate monument to Blount's corner, nearly the full width of the city.

He says that for the present the belt line will not be interfered with, but unless the hill in southwest Macon is cut down, that portion of the line will ultimately be abandoned, and the line turned into Oglethorpe street.

Mr. Voss has, of late, been offered several fine positions by companies in other cities, and negotiations are now pending. It is to be hoped that he will not leave Macon, as his loss would be sadly felt on the line, and among business men generally. NEWS FROM LEE.

Captain Park thinks of running up there to examine the stock. He has been very successful in breeding these ponies on his stock farm at Holton, and is rapidly introducing them in middle Georgia. The People Troubled by Matters of Grave Local Concern.

SPARTA, Ga., June 27.—[Special.]—There are four questions of public interest now agitating our community. Some of the citizens of the 116th, the 117th and the 118th districts G. M. are seeking a repeal of the no-fence law as to those districts, and are preparing to memorialize the legislature on the subject, but their move will be opposed by a majority of the landholders of the rest of the county. A strong effort will also be made to abolish the board of roads and revenues, which will be likewise opposed. The anti-prohibitionists of the county will demand another vote this fall or winter on the liquor question, and as to what will be the result of such a vote is the subject of a great deal of discussion.

But the question which comes most directly home to the people of Sparta and its vicinity is that of enlarging the corporate limits of the town. Those who are at the head of this move wish to extend these limits so that the latter will be two miles square or occupy four square miles, with the courthouse as the center, which would give Sparta about two thousand inhabitants. But the people now living on the suburbs and in the district that will be brough within the corporation, seriously object to this. They say they will receive no benefits and yet be subjected to a great many disadvantages by being brought into town. A survey of the new district is now being made, and it is said that Hon. T. M. Hunt will offer a bill at the adjourned session of the present general assembly to amend the charter of Sparta.

Forty-three were baptised. The strange part about the performance was that when those who had been baptised were carried to the bank, they were greeted with cheers and waving of handkerchiefs by numbers of the army on the bank.

Keeping $2,000,000 Annually at Home. Give us a few moments for the consideration of some figures that will interest you The south sells annually $400,000,000 worth of cotton. She will prosper just in proportion as she keeps this money at home. She will suffer in just such proportion as she sends this money back into outside markets. This is the lesson THE CONSTITUTION has been preaching for fifteen years: that if the south will keep at home the money she gets for her cotton, ten years will see her the richest section of this republic.

Georgia gets about $40,000,000 of this cotton money every year, and Georgia is doing more to keep her cotton money at home than any other southern state. This accounts for Georgia's unusual prosperity. We have had occasion to make this plain in various branches of business. This morning we add a striking illustration.

Ten years ago Georgia used 180,000 tons of commercial fertilizers. Practically every ton of this was bought outside of the state Thousands of tons came from New England, and but little of it was bought this side of Baltimore. This year Georgia used 166,000 tons of fertilizers, of which 94,000 tons were manufactured in the state. Now, let us see what the result of this has been.

The price of fertilizers under the local competition has been reduced from fortyfive dollars a ton to twenty-five dollars a ton. The lesson of fertilizer making has become familiar to our farmers, and they are enriching more ground with a larger quantity of fertilizers, and yet are purchasing nearly twenty thousand tons less from their merchants. The compost heap is becoming a familiar figure, and home-made fertilizers not uncommon.

The main benefit, however, is that our local factories have almost stopped the enormous drain of money to other sections, by keeping at home the bulk of the money for merly sent away for fertilizers. Let us say that one hundred thousand tons of fertilizers are made in Georgia this year. Of ammoniated fertilizers the cotton seed makes sixty per cent of the entire cost. Every dollar of this is kept in Georgia, and cotton seed meal, formerly wasted, utilized to this profit. The sulphuric acid is either reduced from, iron phyrites found in north Georgia, or from blocks of sulphur imported from Italy. Dry bone is purchased in large quantities from local sources, and ground up for use .- Dry blood is purchased at home when possible. The phosphate rock which costs about eight dollars a ton delivered in Atlanta, is made into a fertilizer worth twenty-five dollars a ton, with but a fraction additional sent outside of the state. It is safe to say that of the $2,500,-000 spent by the farmers for the hundred thousand tons of fertilizers made in Georgia, nearly two million dollars is kept with in the limits of the state. This same quantity of fertilizers cost our farmers $4,500,-000 ten years ago, every dollar of which went outside of the state. The result of this immense industrial revolution which has been effected within a w years is far reaching. Within the present month the Patapsco, and the Chesapeake companies, two of the largest guano companies in America, have withdrawn their agencies from Georgia. They are una ble to compete with our local factories. The Eddystone company has established four factories in the south so that it may be able to meet the prices established by the local factories. The lesson is a plain one. Georgia no longer depends on New England, or even on Maryland for her fertilizers. The time has come when factories in those remote sections cannot sell their product by the side of our Georgia factories. As each company withdraws its agencies from this field, it leaves only the more ground for our local companies to cover. Within the next five years it will be exceptional to see a ton of fertilizers sold in Georgia not manufactured within the state. The millions then spent in enriching our soil, instead of draining our purses, will fill them.

We are proud of the record Atlanta has made in this great movement. Considerably over half of the fertilizers manufactured in the state are made within Fulton county. The additional factory noted in our local columns today will increase this percentage, and the new oil mill now being built will add at least one more fertilizer factory. Before President Cleveland's second term expires Fulton county will be making one hundred thousand tons of fertilizers every year, and Georgia will be making enough in addition to supply the demand of every farmer in the state.

The Cotton Movement

The New York Financial Chronicle, in its weekly review of the cotton movement, says that for the week ending June 24th, the total receipts have reached 2,364 bales, against 3,549 bales last week, 4,032 bales the previous week and 7.599 bales three weeks since; making the total receipts since the first of September, 1886, 5,187,182 bales, against 5,247,193 bales for the same period of 1885-86, showing a decrease since September 1, 1886, of 60,011 bales.

The exports for the week reach a total of 10,072 bales, of which 3,385 were to Great Britain, 1,500 to France and 5,187 to the rest of the continent. The total sales for forward delivery for the week are 810,000 bales. For immediate delivery the total sales foot up this week 6,696 bales, including 2,700 for export, 3,996 for consumption Of the above, 400 bales were to arrive.

The decrease in amount in sight tonight as compared with last year is 112,860 bales, ease as compared with 1884 730,089 bales, and the increase over 1883-84 is 697.034 bales. The old interior stocks have increased during the week 47 bales, and are tonight 53,808 bales less than at the same period last year. The receipts at the same towns have been 1,178 bales less than the same week last year, and since Septem ber 1 the receipts at all the towns are 44,981 bales less than for the same time in 1885-86.

The imports into continental ports during the week have been 50,000 bales. There was a decrease of cotton in sight Friday night of 75,785 bales as compared with the same date of 1886, a decrease of 59,937 bales as compared with the corresponding date of 1885 and a decrease of 337,687 bales as compared with 1884. The total receipts from the plantations since September 1, 1886, are 5,184,374 bales; in 1885-86 were 5,327,975 bales; in 1884-85 were 4,733,796 bales. Although the receipts at the outports the past week were 2,364 bales, the actual movement from plantations was only 1,523 bales, the balance being taken from the stocks at the interior towns. Last year the receipts from the plantations for the same week were 5, 721 bales and for 1885 they were --- bales.

The Chronicle says that the speculation in cotton for future delivery at New York for the week under review has been at variable but generally drooping prices. On Saturday there was a sharp decline for this crop, but the depression was arrested in the later dealings on Monday, with a firmer tone on Tuesday on drouth reports from the south near the close. On Wednesday the reopening of the Liverpool market at a considerable decline caused much depression, to which the fall of needed rain at the south contributed. Thursday Liverpool having made a partial recovery and rains at the south somewhat heavy this market was better; but a flurry in the money market caused measiness and led to some "unloading." under which the early advance was nearly lost. Friday there was an advance on a better report from Liverpool and some ap prehension of a "squeeze" on early delive ries, but the close is 15 to 18 points below last Friday. Cotton on the spot met with only a moderate demand for home consumption, and quotations were reduced 1-16c. on Saturday, &c. on Monday, 1-16c. on Wednesday and 1-16c. Thursday, when there was a good business for export. Friday the market was fairly active for home consumption and very firm at 10%c. for middling uplands.

According to such republicans as Ingalls, when a negro votes the democratic ticket, his suffrage is a failure. But this is a mistake. When a majority of the negroes get to voting the democratic ticket, it will amount to a new era for the negro in the Senatorial Sorrows.

Perhaps never before in the history of the United States have so many United States senators-elect been on the anxious bench. When the senate meets next December it will have a calendar unusually full of contests. The seat of Senator Turpie, of Indiana, is to be contested on the ground that the legislature which elected him was not properly organized.

Senator Hearst, of California, will have to defend his title against a charge that money was used to procure it.

Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, has been refused a certificate of election by Governor Wilson who contends that the legisla. ture had no right to elect a senator at its called session.

Senator Pasco, of Florida, may also find a flaw in his title. The legislature which elected him, it is claimed, was not organized as the new state constitution prescribed. If this be true, all the proceedings of that legislature, including the election of senator, will be vitiated. Senator Pasco can afford to feel easy, for should a new election be re quired by reason of a technicality there is no loubt that he would be chosen again. In the West Virginia case, it is a question between two democrats, Senator Lucas, who was appointed by the governor after the long and fruitless dead lock in the legislature, and Senator Faulkner, who was elected at a special session of the legislature called to attend to other business.

In the California and Indiana cases, the question of party will come in, especially in the sharp contest that is to be made over Senator Turpie's election. If objection be made to the swearing in of the three or four senators whose titles will be questioned. the republicans will have control of the senate by a clear majority, whatever Senator Riddleberger may do, for all the senators whose seats are disputed are democrats.

Still there is every probability that they will all be seated eventually. The senate has never stood as squarely on party lines in contested elections as the house generally does, and there is very little in the Indiana or California contests, which are the only ones involving political prejudice. The senate is, therefore, almost sure to stand thirty-eight republicans to thirty-seven democrats, with Senator Riddleberger as an unknown quantity, with a leaning towards the democrats. He is bitter against the repub lican leaders and may wheel squarely into line with the democrats, thus making the senate a tie, with no vice-president to cast a deciding vote.

THE New Orleans Picayune announces that the union is back in the south to stay.

This is a very true remark.

In Shallow Waters.

From time to time the announcement goes the rounds of the daily press that "the greatest story of the age" will shortly make its appearance. If we are to believe the daily newspapers, the long-looked-for American novel is already here. Scarcely a week passes in which one is not introduced with the usual flourish of trumpets.

It requires only a cursory examination of all this fiction to reach the conclusion that much of it is elaborately inane, while the rest is too crude to be satisfactory.

But why all this puffing? The syndicate system is largely responsible for it. In order to supply the demand the syndicates take the hastily written stories of authors whose names are familiar to the public. Beguiled by the cheapness of the system the newspapers purchase their stuff, and then the trouble begins. Editors who are conscientions and critical in other matters do not hesitate to inform their readers that their new story is "the literary sensation of the day," and that its author has reached the very pinnacle of fame.

Now, the average reader in this bus does not take the time and the pains to his own literary judgment. Life is too short. He reads the editorial criticism turns over to the story page and with the complacent feeling that he has got hold of some good literature, the genuine article, at last, proceeds to enjoy himself.

Naturally the writers and the readers ac and react upon each other. In the absence of a proper standard of criticism, literary taste descends to a low level, and shallow writers toil for shallow readers. Of the so-called brilliant young men who are turning out two or three literary masterpieces every year, how many of them have produced anything that will live? The present generation has produced no Disraeli, with his "Vivian Grey;" no Macaulay, with his essay on "Milton;" no Byron, with his flery, passionate, eloquent verse, three electrified the English-speaking world at an age when most youths are poring over their college text books. With all our boasted educational progress and our modern culture, the present generation has produced no such bright youngsters as these. But Disraeli, Byron and Macaulay lived at a time when there was a literary standard and when there was such a thing as authoritative literary criticism. They did not turn out "flimsy," because "flimsy" was not then in demand. Before us as we write is an English review. It contains several articles from the pens of the younger writers of the day. To do them justice they are all above the American average, but in the main they exhibit the prevailing evil of the age, shallowness. One article, however, is Mr. Gladstone's review of "Leeky's History of the Eighteeth Century." Here we have substance and style, something to excite admiration and stimulate thought. But Mr. Gladstone was trained under the old system, a system in which the demand for good literature brought to the fore men with the capacity to produce it.

We have not yet come to the worst Great, barren wastes of jargon and chaotic ideas must be crossed before there will be a reaction. In the meantime, let us be as patient as may be with the "pot-boiler" stuff dealt out to us as literature. It is as bad as can be, but it is all that we can get.

HIS HATE GRAVEN ON A SHAFT. Daniel Murphy Rears a Monument "To Outlast the British Monarchy."

New York World. New York World.

An imposing column rears its head in section N of the new Cavairy cemetery. It does not fail to attract the attention of those visiting the soldiers monument adjacent, or, for that matter of visitors generally, for the column is forty feet high, and bears on its summit a handsome Greek cross, which can be seen from afar. This column or monument was erected by Daniel Murphy, the blind septuagenarian of New York's Fourth ward, who lives at the corof New York's Fourth ward, who lives ner of Pearl and New Chambers streets, and is well known in Gotha The monument wi The monument was chiseled out of gray granite stone by Ambrose Clancy from designs furnished by Mr. Murphy himself. It is of mixed architecture. The pedestal is Gothic, and the Ionic, Corinthian and Doric styles are represented in the plinth, shaft and capital, 1t cost $20,600 in construction, exclusive of the stone, and was raised twelve years ago, after Mr. Murphy had visited some of the mous cemeteries in the country in search of design But the monument claims less attention than a sentence cut deeply and indelibly into the third step leading to the base. It reads: "TO OUTLAST THE BRITISH MONARCHY."

These are the words that attract Irishmet Irish-Americans who pass that way, and make them pause in the deep appreciation of a sentiment that illustrates the intense, the implacable hatred of their race to the British empire. Daniel Murphy does not lie in the vault under that monument. This is what the old man said to a World reporter

We would like to see the flag of the glorious old Eighteenth Georgia tendered to the government that it may be preserved in the apitol forever. We would have it bear this in Regiment, Confederate States Volunteers, of the army of northern Virginia. Robert E. Lee bared his illustrious head and saluted it on the field as it was borne past him in a charge which cleared the foc as the whirlwind sweeps the chaff away. The fair lock of hair which binds the remnants of this that the flag together was cut from the temple of a New York Zouave. A shell tore through the flag, when the color bearer stooped and, cutting this lock from the Zonave's brow, tied up the flag and lifted it again in the hellstorm of battle, the long lock gleaming like gold above tho men who cheered again and again at this most glorious amendment. "The survivors of the Eighteenth Georgia Regi ment Confederate States Volunteers of the army o northern Virginia, present this flag to the nation that it may be preserved at the capitol, where the citizens of the entire country may view it, and pil grim from every land through all coming years be hold the battle flag of that regiment whose glorious achievements on the field of battle its surviving members look to history to record and the love of liberty to perpetuate in the minds of men forever.

A few evenings since Mr. Jellerson, who keeps the saloon at Glenbrook, was out bathing in the lake, when something suddenly wrapped about him like a wet blanket. He was close to the shore and got there pretty lively. When he climbed up the wharf the blanket, as it appeared to be, was all wrapped about him in a queer way. He rushed into the saloon and was horrified to discover tha the thing which was wrapped around him was alive. It held on with a terrible suction and required several men to get it off. A scientist who was stopping at the hotel pronounced it an elactys cacynthius, or what is vulgarly known as the blanket fish. It frequents the waters of the Polar Sea and is only occasionally found in fresh water., exand is only occasionally found in fresh water., ex-cept deep, cold lakes, and generally stays near the bottom. It is sometimes found in the Pacific Ocean as low as the thirty-fifth parallel. It wraps around s victim and by impeding the motion of its limb causes it to drown. It is dark brown in color, with black specks, and weighs about twenty-five pounds. When stretched out it was about six feet long by five broad, and not over an inch thick.

How the Anti-Treating Society Originated in a Tragedy and is Spreading in the outh-Attracts Notice Elsewh

MACON, Ga., June 27 .- [Special.]-A new temperance crusade which recently had its ori-gin in Macon promises by reason of its direct nethod and of its economy to spread over wide territory. There are many in fact who look upon it as a practical solution of one of the great drink evils. It is an Anti-Treating, society and its energy is directed not again all drinking but only against the social cup. Thus it does not deny to anybody personal liberty, but it is thought to have the germ of a great social reform in it. The Anti-Treating society is the outcome of remark by the late Mr. S. H. Jemison, a lawyer, and at the time a member of the legis lature. He was not an advocate of prohibition nor did he believe in total abstinence, but in his social career he had full opportunity of knowing the immense evil caused by "social drinking." In his opinion the great-er percentage of drunkenness would not exist if this custom of treating to drinks could be abolished. It is thoroughly an American custom, and as such is a sad reflection upon the intelligence, independence and refinement of the American people, although it grows out of our abundant generosity. argument was simply against the immoderate amount of drinking by those who would not have cared for more than one drink apiece treating after "being treated." Mr. Jemisor thought such a society would prove a great help just where it was most needed. The society might not have had a vitalizing force but for Mr. Jemison's death under cir cumstances that emphasized the idea. With a party of friends he was drinking in a bar room when an acquaintance who was in the saloon, but was not one of the drinking party, became insulted because he was not included in the treat, drew a pistol and shot Jemison - the shot taking effect in the lungs. Jemison turned upon him and shot him dead. But he also had received a mortal wound. He was a young man of ability and promise, and his tragic death in early life recalled to the memory of his friends his many commendations of this special plan of temperance work, and it was under such circumstances that the Anti-Treating society began its crusade. The work of this society consists in the distribution of pledge cards among those who desire to join it, and the following is the form of the pledge:

I. (A. E.)—do solemnly swear that I willi not drink with or ask any one to drink in any public place or elsewhere any spirituous or malt liquors, wine or cider; nor will I engage in any game of chance in any public place or elsewhere for liquor in any of its forms, either spirituous or malt, as a forfeit.

Executed in duplicare at Macon, Ga.—
this — day of June, 1887.

N. B.—This card to be retained by the person signing it.

The duplicate card which is returned to the secretary of the society, is the same as the pledge card retained, but bears on the reverse side the following:

THE ANTI-TREATING SOCIETY Of Jemison Division No. 1, County of Bibb, State of Georgia, Very Respectfully, A. B..

P. O. Address, All persons who desire it can procure executed copies of this card on application to Secretary of the A. T. S., at 136 Orange St., Macon. Ga. N. B.—Return this copy as above.

The duplicate pledge card bears on this side the name of the person who solicited the signing of the card or the name of the gentleman to whom it may be sent through the mail. Both ladies and gentlemen have become members of the society. There are now sixty members in Macon, and seven anti-treating societies have been formed in other towns in Georgia, and are beginning active work. The ociety at Macon is known as the Jemison division No. 1, that at Milledgeville Jemison divison No. 2, and so on according to the time of organization. Numerous inquiries have been received at headquarters asking about the work, its plans, and the like. Some of these are from other states, including northern states, two from Scotland and France, one from Nova Scotia and one from the Bermuda islands. In effect, the form that the liquor law in Georgia has taken in some counties and towns accomplishes the same purpose as the Anti-Treating Society. In Atlanta, for example, a man cannot buy less than a quart of liquor. This discourages treating at ba and all public places, if not at home. And the dea has spread in another direction. the recent session of the Florida legislature bill was introduced making it a misdemean to invite a man to take a drink. The bill was killed by ridicule: but it showed that the anti-treating idea had got abroad.

It is not a prohibitory or total abstinence novement, but it is a very practical reform movement, directed against a social custon that is undoubtedly responsible for much of the intemperance of the United States.

An Awkward Incident.

From the London Society.

A most grotesque incident recently occurred as the queen was leaving Windsor castle for Scotland or Osborne, we forget which. One of John Brown's Highland connections had already seen her majesty safely into the royal saloon, and was returning from the royal carriage at the station gates with a heap of wraps and rugs, when from between the folds there rolled on to the platform nothing less than two bottles of "Scotch" The countenances of the officials, which are on the occasions of her majesty's comings and goings invariably frozen into an expression of idlocy, thawed, and every man was convulsed with isuppressed laughter. The whisky made a very pretty show as it lay on the departure platform, but, after all, perhaps th ace of the gillie was better worth studying

My Love Goeth Forth. Soft is the sky, and the joy of birds Breaks from the copes on the budding bree,
And the air hath the dream of the peaceful herds
That graze in the fields today,
And the brook hath a turn in its wavering strain
That steals to my heart like a passionate though
The phantoms of evil assail me in valu.
And set the world's wisdom at naught.

For my love goeth for?h. and her robes are white,
White like the clouds at the break of dawn.
Fair, fair, and a madness doth burn in my sight
Lest the vision shall be withdrawn.
My love goeth forth, and the lingering air
Lifteth up the soft tresses that shadow her eyes;
"Is an angel, I say, hath been drawn by my prayes
To come down from that land in the skies.

What envious hand doth lay
The keen blade to the grasses?
What blight hath turned to gray

Dull is the sky; the mingling joy of birds
Sounds from the dell, but music's balm hath fied.
I heard the lowing of returning herds,
But hope and love are dead,
The brook's soft wave doth murmur at my feet,
Like some lost voice that calleth from afar;
The withered leaves sail like a mournful fleet
Which cometh back from war.
For my love goeth forth, and her robe is white,

Cannot lift the soft lashes which shadow her

ANOTHER CASE

Of Negroes Forcing Themselves Into a Ladies' Coach.

THEY MAKE A COMPLAINT TO THE Interstate Commission About Their Treat ment on the Georgia Railroad at Conyers-The Facts in the Case.

A few days ago an account of some negroes being ejected from the ladies' coach on the fast train of the Georgia railroad at Conyers, was published in The Constitution. The matter has brought forth fruit quickly, for the ejected darkies have already made complaint to the interstate commission at Washington concerning the treatment they were sub-

Fortunately, for all parties, the commission will not be able to notice the complaint, for the reason that the railroad authorities had nothing to do with the matter at all. The cirrumstances were as follows: When the fast train left Atlanta a company of negroes occuces were as follows: When the fast pied seats in the ladies' ceach. The conductor asked them to go forward to the coach provided for them, equally as comfortable as the one they were then in, and in which white people were not allowed to ride.

which white people were not allowed to ride. The Georgia railroad provides first-class accommodations for its colored passengers, and the trainmen are particularly instructed not to permit white people to intrude upon the darkies. Anvone who has traveled on the Georgia road knows how strictly this rule is emforced. The negroes would not obey the conductor, and refused to leave the coach. Several of the passengers advised them to go, as it would be to their advantage, intimating that if they did not go of their own accord, in the end they would be forced to go. But the negroes would not heed the warning.

The trainmen were particular not to move the negroes by force, fearing an unpleasant law suit, and while they were very much tempted to run them into the car provided for their own race, they restrained their inclination.

When the train stopped at the first 4elegraph

When the train stopped at the first delegraph station, a passenger got out and sent a telegram to Conyers, stating that the negroes were on board, and acquainting the Conyers party with all the facts. When the train stopped at Congers, ten or twelve men, armed with guns and pistols, boarded the train and stopped in front of the negroes. Theu they pointed to the car in front provided for them. The pantomime was fully understood, and the negroes got, nor did they stand upon the order of their going. The passengers had no more trouble the rest of the trip, the negroes being very quiet and humble. The Conyers people were mentioned in terms of the greatest affection. The sequel is shown in the complaint to the interstate commission, but the facts, as reported, would seem for relieve the railroad company from any blame in the matter, even if under the law, any blame attaches to any one. One of the complainants is one W. H. Heard, pastor of Mount Zion church in Charleston. If Heard is the man his initials would seem to indicate, and the one he is thought to be, he is not unknown to the people of Atlanta and Georgia. He is a short, thick set negro, possessed of more impudence and insolence than any dozen politicians of his own color. He taught school for some years in Athens, and was a prominent local politician there. On the occasion of the last republican convention held in Georgia, when the body met in the house of representatives, Heard was unduly prominent by the frequency and fervor of his speeches. The records show that he spoke as often as nineteen times on one motion in one day, and his remarks were not prrticularly connent by the frequency and fervor of his speeches. The records show that he spoke as often as nineteen times on one motion in one day, and his remarks were not prrticularly concise or graphic. He has a noise that can be heard above the voice of many waters, and his power gave him an immense advantage over his opponent. As a politician, Heard's reputation was not very good. His fondness for going over from one side to the Jother according to financial circumstances, is said to have amounted almost to a passion. amounted almost to a passion.

It is hoped that in his more sacred vocation he has steered clear of the flesh pots over which so many of his race so frequently stumbled.

County Rapist, in Fulton Jail.

Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock Henry Pope, the Chattooga county rapist, sentenced to death at the last term of the superior court of Chattooga county, arrived in Atlanta in care of the sheriff and his deputy.

The public will remember that a strong effort is being made upon the governor to commute Pope's death sentence, or to grant him a respite, in order that an investigation may be had in regard to the reports that have been received as to Pope's whereappears on the day of mute Pope's death sentence, or to grant him a respite, in order that an investigation may be had in regard to the reports that have been received as to Pope's whereabouts on the day of the crime. Nime men will swear that Pope was 100 miles away in Alabama on the day the crime is said to have been committed. If this is true Pope cannot, by any possibility of circumstances, have been guilty of the crime for which he is under sentence of death.

The feeling in Chattooga county is very strong against Pope. The citizens are, and have been, very much wrought up about the matter, and the authorities were apprehensive that if the governor respited the man pending an investigation, or commuted his sentence to life imprisonment, the fury of the populace would break down the barriers of the law, and in all probabilities lynch the man, Judge Maddox ordered the sheriff to bring Pope to Atlanta for safe keeping, and as stated, he arrived here yesterday. Pope is a ginger cake colored negro about five feet eleven, and has rather a pleasant face. He stontly asserts his innocence. While his reputation is none of the best, because of his connection with various crimes in Chattooga, a large number of the most impartial and conservative citizens of the county regard him as innocent of the crime of which he has been convicted. The governor is investigating the matter, and in all probability will reach a conconvicted. The governor is investigating the matter, and in all probability will reach a conclusion today or tomorrow.

A RATTLESNAKE'S FANGS.

George King Bitten by a Venomous Reptite.

George King, a sixteen-year-old lad, was bitten by a large rattlesnake last Sunday afternoon, and his condition is now precarious. He was out in the woods near Buckhead, some three or four miles from Atlanta, and being tired sat down on a log to rest. Scarcely had he taken his seat when the ominous rattle of a snake was heard close by. Seizing a stick the boy essayed to kill the rattler, which was coiled upon the ground within a yard of the log. While he was in the act of picking up the stick the snake struck his langs into the boy's leg. The boy was terribly alarmed by the suddenness of the attack, and he started to run as fast as he could for his home, nearly a mile away. While the boy was running the snake held fast to his leg, and it required a violent effort to shake him off.

King's leg was fearfully swollen when he King's leg was fearfully swollen when he reached home. Soon afterward he fell into convulsions and became delirious. All that medical skill could do to reduce the swelling and relieve the pain was done, but without much success.

A DESERVED COMPLIMENT.

A Well Known Newspaper Man Secures an Excellent Appointment.

Georgia secures two of the twenty-eight Postoffice inspectors just appointed by Postmaster General Vilas, the lucky appointees being George C. Stewart, of Griffin, and J.W. Erwin, of Atlanta.

Mr. Stewart is the son of Hon. John D. Stewart, congressman from this district, and is highly thought of by all who know him.

Mr. Erwin is well known as the city editor of the Evening Journal. He came to Atlanta several years ago and has, during his residence here, made many warm friends, who will join The Constitution in congratulating him upon his good fortune. He is an able newspaper man and a thorough gentleman, and will doubtless prove a most efficient postoffice official. The good impression he has made with the people with whom he has been thrown is shown by the high testimonials, from the most prominent men of the state, which he took with him to Washington.

Mr. Erwin will begin drawing government pay from July 1.

MILITARY MATTERS.

The Rifles to go Into Camp-The Zouave Organized.

About forty members of the Atlanta Zouaves, the latest candidates for popular favor, met for formal organization last evening.

A great deal of interest was manifested by the members and the universal feeling is that the new company is going to be a success.

After considerable discussion a constitution was adopted and by-laws determined upon. The matter of the captaincy was discussed at length and it was decided to ask a prominent gentleman well known in military circles to take the place. As his consent to accept has not as yet been obtained the name is withheld.

A committee was appointed to select an armory. Several halls have been offered the company, and a selection will be made in a day or so. The company is now ready for the governor's order for an election, and as soon as that is done will perfect the organization.

The Rifles.

After the regular drill last night the Atlanta Rifles held a short meeting to determine upon the time and place for holding the annual encampment. It was decided to hold the encampment at Cumberland island for ten days, commencing on some day between the first and fifteenth of Angust. Sergeant W. J. Kendrick will leave for the island today to select the grounds and make all necessary arrangements. On next Friday night the date will be definitely determined upon.

Captain Ella's return from Augusta was ap-propriately celebrated and there was a big turn out. "What's the matter?" asked the captain.
"I have one request to make," began the hero of this tale as he mounted one of the benches. "I want you and the Salvation Army to pray for me. I am not a mean man. I am honest and pay my honest debts, but I have one temptation, and I want you to help me."

"Are you going to pray for yourself?"
"Yes, I'll try."
Then he became the center of an interesting group, and Colonel Light, the captain and others led in prayer.
During a song which followed, the newspaper man made a quiet sneak and disappeared in the darkness.

Then the army began to think that it had been the victim of a hoax.

From the New York Sun. "I have made a mile a minute on horseback,

As a grizzled stranger with a quartzite pin made this remark, a silence fell upon the little group of turimen who sat in the corridor of the Windsor hotel, at Denver, the other evening. The man who had just told of driving an unrecorded mile in 2:11 arose deliberately, brushed the ashes off his cigar, buttoned his overcoat, and walked away. "I am a liar, myself," somebody began.

"Hold on," said the stranger, "this isn't a

"Have you the papers for it?"

"No, nor the judge's affidavits, In fact, nobody saw it except myself, but if you will permit me to tell you the circumstances, I'll leave it to yourself whether it isn't a fact."

"Blaze away."

The group drew closer. Even the man who had walked off suspended his conversation with the hotel clerk and listened on the quiet. The grizzled stranger removed a section of to-bacco from his mouth and began:

"This happened five years ago last fall. I was living in Leadville at the time, but had mining interests that took me frequently into the outlying districts for a radius of perhaps a dozen miles. These trips I nearly always made on horseback, on a tough little broncho. hard mouthed, trained to mountain roads, and capable of keeping up a jog-trot at a pinch for twenty hours on a stretch. On the occasion in question I started very early one clear, cold morning for a claim I owned on the other side of the divide, on the slope of what is called Gold Mountain—you can find it by looking on any map. To reach it I had to first cross Tennessee park and then wind over a very crooked, tortuous trail that gradually ascended to a Gold Mountain—you can find it by looking on any map. To reach it I had to first cross Tennessee park and then wind over a very crooked, tortuous trail that gradually ascended to a pass somewhere above Timber Pine. It was not more than two miles as the crow flies, but nine by the road, owing to the frequent zigzagging or tacking made necessary by the steepness of the range.

"I took things easy, and it was about noon when I reached the claim. I had a couple of men at work there, ate dinner at their cabin, and then went over to look at the shaft. One has no idea how rapidly time passes underground, where everything is dark, and when I came up I was surprised to find that it was nearly 4 o'clock, and the shadows of pimons a hundred yards off had crawled up to the windlass. I was ainfoyed, too, for there was a suggestion of snow in the air, and the ride across Tennessee park in a storm—well, the less said about it the better. So I lost no time in getting into the saddle, and pushed rapidly ahead toward the pass. I had to go quite a little distance before I reached it, and all the time the sky grew grayer and grayer, and presently a few flakes began to fall. I urged the getting into the saddle, and pushed rapidly ahead toward the pass. I had to go quite a little distance before I reached it, and all the time the sky grew grayer and grayer, and presently a few flakes began to fall. I urged the broncho, and finally began the descent.

"The road beyond the pass led down a long, straight incline for about a quarter of a mile. This took it to the fringes of timber pine, and then it made a detour of nearly two miles to get around a spur of the range. At that point I paused. The idea occurred to me that I could make a short cut by going directly over the spur and striking the trail on the other side. The range was not particularly steep at this place, but rather a succession of rough eminences, and the undertaking did not seem to be accompanied by danger. A sudden raw wind decided me. I turned the broncho off the road and started.

"The plan appeared the more feasible as I advanced. What looked like steep ascents at a distance proved to be gentle ones, and I was soon pretty nearly across. The spur was well wooded with old pine trees, some of which had rotted as they lay, and on the far side the declivity extended down at an even slope clear to the valley, where big rocks and boulders looked like grains of blasting powder, and the road like a tiny streak. I remember yet how, between the tree tops, I caught a glimpse of the park with the Arkansas river winding through it, and the whole thing looking like some map in my old geography. That was the last thing that impressed itself on my mind before my horse staggered, stumbled, plunged a little, and then came down with a crash, first on his fore legs and then flat on his belly, his head down hill. I can't readily describe it, but he fell in such a way that my right leg, without being crushed or even much bruised, was twisted in the stirrup strap and caught fast.

"Right here let me stop to explain a circumstanted that will enable you to understand the situation. Down in the valley, at the base of Gold mountain, was a sawmill owned by George Lacy, of Leadville, and extending up from its yard, almost to timber line, was what is called a log shoot. This is simply a V-shaped trough, large enough to hold a good-sized pine trunk, and built solidly against the face of the mountain. Of course it has to be straight, or nearly so, to permit the logs to slide down without obstruction, and use soon makes the inside as smooth as glass. Such a contrivance saves a great deal of hauling, for as the trees are cut, they are dragged over and dumped into the trough, and go down to the yard like a streak of lightning. In the course of time, the pressure will drive the trough in pretty nearly level to the earth. This was the case with the Lacy shoot, Moreover, it had not been used for about a year, and pine needles, dead boughs, and other rubbish had in places almost hidden it from sight. I was well enough acquainted with the mountains to know, the instant my broncho fell, that he had walked into the old log shoot. I was not aware of it at the time, but I think now that that headlong tumble broke his back then and there, and he never knew what hurt him.

"It takes a moment for the coolest head to clear itself in times of unlooked-for peril, and-long before that moment had elapsed the broncho and I were on our way to the valley, going faster at every breath, nothing to stop us, death shead, and the devil's own railroad underneath. I was sitting almost erect in the saddle. The leather flaps had twisted around and kept my legs from rubbing against the sides of the trough, but held me like bands of iron. Even had they not, jumping off would have been out of the question. I have never been on a toboggan, but I think that people who have will understand why I bent all my energies to holding on. I did not faint and did not get dizzy; there was a hideous roaring in my ears, a furious wind seemed to bruised and hursed over and over, and then everything was still.

"When the moon was well up I came to myself. I was lying in a snowdrift, rubbing at my head and moaning. After a long time I crawled a little ways, and then cell down and cried for my very helplessness. I must have been a little flighty, and heaven know how I found my way to Lacy's mil, a quarter of a mile beyond; but I did, somehow, and thay carried me in and sent for help. You see the old timber shoot had fallen into decay, and some distance above the yard was a broken place that saved my life. When we reached it the dead broncho jumped the trough and the two of us went sailing and turning and cavorting over a field of fresh snow until we stuck into a drift about 500 yards away. The broncho had the worst of it, even there, for he kept on going until he struck solid earth. I broke three ribs and this arm in so many different places that the doctor wanted to cut it off and be done with it. What puzzled the mill men most was that my legs escaped, but the saddle flaps were worn to fringe and I suppose that explains it. From the point where I started to the break was over two miles, and the old hands there said logs used to make it in less than two minutes. I had no stop watch, but I'll back myself against any log that ever made the trip." that ever made the trip

THE BETTER PART OF VALOR. And Sheriff Jim White of El Paso Knew it

And Sheriff Jim White of El Paso Knew it and Acted Accordingly.

From the St. Louis Republican.

If the train robbers had known that Sheriff Jim White of El Paso was on board the train they proposed to rob, would they have made the assault? That's a question. In 1881 the mayor of El Paso went to the customhouse and begged White, who was then a mounted inspector, to go up to El Paso street, where three or four men were lying dead and half a dozen more were wounded, and put down a gang of desperadoes who had taken the town. The streets were deserted save by the bad men, who were settling a difficulty in true Texas style. Hannah Burns, a washerwoman with a Billingsgate tongue, was the only person who dared to speak her mind and tell the boys what she thought of the proceedings. With her arms akimbo and her tongue in full motion she stood in the street and defied the killers. They would not shoot her; they could not silence her, so they let her alone. No one dared to oppose the desperate fellows who had already killed several people. The local police were powerless, and the mayor, or some of the citizens, called on White. He suddenly appeared on the street with; a big gun in each hand and called out: "Jim White will do'the rest of the shooting; get off this street," and the battle was over.

A few years before he was travelling in a stage coach, when one of the passengers insulted a lady. The mild-mannered man who sat opposite the lady called to the driver to stop the coach. He took the blackguard out, tied him to a tree, stripped him, and gave him an unmerciful lashing with the stage driver's whip. He is tall, well-bred, gentle and brave; a Texan gentleman with a blue eye and a habit of shooting quick and straight, with a gun in each hand. He wears collars and cuffs, and brushes his clothes and keeps his boots polished. If he were to walk down Fourth street he would be taken for a contracting freight agent of one of the fast lines, or perhaps for the general agent of an insurance company. He was or one of the fast lines, or perhaps for the general agent of an insurance company. He was made sheriff of El Paso county in 1884, and has held the office ever since. He has a record for bravery unsurpassed on the frontier, and is universally respected. He is not a desperado; he is simply a fearless man, who in an unsettled condition of society has often found it necessary to keep the man, not a desperado; he is simply a tearless man, who in an unsettled condition of society has often found it necessary to keep the peace by fighting for it. If Jim White was ever held up before, there is no record of the case. If heads were ever broken with six-shooters, and inocent people robbed in his presence by desperadoes who escaped unhurt; before this train robbery, the Texan reporters have failed to chronicle the event.

Yet the desperadoes say that White was in the sleeper which was rifled, and did not shoot. True, he was not robbed himself, for the bandits left the coach before coming to his berth; but that makes no difference. The fact remains that a train has been rifled when one of the nerviest men of Texas was on board, one of the quickest shots, one of the bravest sheriffs, with a record. And what does it all prove? Simply this: That those people who talk about resisting a systematic and well-planned hold up, and think if they had been there they would have headed a successful attack against the robbers, don't know what they are talking would have headed a successful attack against the robbers, don't know what they are talking about. Men who have been held up tell strange about Men who have been held up tell strange stories about the diameter of the gum muzzles they looked down. They astonish us with the descriptions of the eyes of robbers, and how determined they looked. The simple fact is that 'hands up' in Texas means 'hands up,' and when Jim White lies still in his berth and listens to a conversation in Spanish between his wife and a Mexican lieutenant, who is subsequently pounded over the head with a six-shooter and does not show fight, it is because he knew that in such cases discretion is the better part of valor.

Mules and Cross Eyed Men.

From the Philadelphia News. The affinity between red headed girls and white horses has been discovered by the New York Evening Sun, and investigated in Philadelphia as well as in other of the more civilized cities. As yet no convincing explanation has been offered of the undoubted fact that a sober man may stop at almost any street corner and count a red headed girl for ble that there are about as many red headed girls as white horses in the world, and that it is therefore perfectly natural for the two to be met with in equal numbers. Just as the thirteen supersition may be due to the fact that one of any given thirteen hu-man beings is in the course of nature likely to die or be subjected to some misfortune within a reasonable period dating from any given time. But all this doesn't throw any light on the relations existing between cross eyed men and mules.

That a mule should be seen in the immediate vicinity of every cross eyed man to be noticed on the streets of a great city is inexplicable. That a man in the vicinity of a mule should be seen looking cross eyed at the mule's hind legs would not be so strange. Whether the sinister look of his natural human foe angers and yet attracts the offspring of the gentle donkey, like a baleful magnet; or whether the desire to get away excites the weird eyed indi-vidual to look and walk in the wrong direction, re-mains yet to be ascertained. That these interesting animals are to be seen in conjunction is a fact any one may prove for himself. Its explanation is a problem to be solved by cross eyed sages and learned

A Venerable Parrot From the Chicago News. "My parrot is 100 years old," said Erastus Judd, living at 608 Elm street. "I have had him for thirty years and my father had him about forty years. 'Old Putnam,' as we call him, used to belong to my grandfather, Seth Judd, who lived at Shelburne falls, Mass. The old gentleman got him from a sailor in Boston. I have family letters dated in 1000 in which 'Old Putnam,' for seffence of the sail of the from a sailor in Boston. I have family letters dated in 1790, in which 'Old Putnam' is referred to as 'a prettie bird whiche hath been taught to say after one much of our New England primer and certain of Dr. Watt's hymns for the young.' I do not see that the parrot is not as young as ever. He is very docile and he talks as cleverly as a child of 6. His plumage is still bright, but his sight has falled him somewhat. The way to tell the age of a parrot is to count the rings on his claws. A new ring, or wrinkle, comes every tenth year. 'Old Putnam' has nine of these rings and a starter for the tenth."

Far back in the middle ages there was a legend that a certain Bishop Hatto accumulated corn, and, rather than sell it to the poor people cheaper than some standard he fixed, he said the rats might eat the corn and himself before he would come down a penny. Whereupon, according to the monkish legend, the mice and the rats swam the river Rhine to the bishop's tower out on the island, and there ate the bishop, who for the first time agreed with

On Stonewall and Chappel Streets.

On Number one there is a Large, well has a nice, cosy frame cottage. All of this property is convenient to stores, churches and horse care. This is about the highest point in Alanta, and of course one of the very healthlest. The front on Stonewall is to the north, and overlooks the entire city. Here is a rare opportunity to invest in first class property. It has not been upon the market before in the past twenty-five years, but there has never been a day it has not been in demand. The corner lot would be an excellent place for a business house, because of its great prominence on the very crest of this grand old hill. Secure your plat at my office, select your lot and be on hand. The absent man need expect no benefits. There was very little support given to prices, and London appeared as a seller. The money market was also an influential factor in the decline, rates being bid up to 3/4 per cent a day and interest. THE CHICAGO MARKET. Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Produce.

Special to The Constitution.
CHICAGO, June 27—Trading in the wheat pit to CHICAGO, June 27—Trading in the wheat pit to-day was almost as quiet as on Saturday, although there was a moderate inquiry for wheat. The feel-ing was weaker and prices were lower, though prices held steady at the established decline. Receipts were small here and shipments were large, causing a rapid reduction in the stock in store. The visible supply statement showed a decrease of 2,567,000 bush-els and a still more rapid decrease is looked for in the els, and a still more rapid decrease is looked for in the immediate future. The millers in the interior, whose stocks had all became very low, and who did not feel disposed to buy when wheat was at much higher figures, have bought quite freely recently, and the effects of this will be made in the visible supply of next week, as well as that just passed. July opened 1,60% lower at 69%669%, declined to 69% 69%, and after the amountement of the decrease in the visible supply, reacted, closing at 697%.

Trading in com was also light again, ruling quiet during most of the day, though toward the close there was more dealing, due chiefly to dry weather. The visible supply showed a decrease of 915,000 bushels. July opened at 45%, sold down to 35% and closed at 36%, sold down to 35% and closed at 36%, sold down to 45% and closed at 36%, sold down to 45%.

Speculative trading in oats was more active. Buying orders were quite free, especially for deferred futures. Reports of dry weather and not very favorable crop outlook caused increased buying, and made seliers a little seared. July opened at 25c, sold up to 26%c and closed at 36%c.

Speculative trading in provisions was moderately active, and operators watched the market closely, fearing that the report of fire at the stock yards yesterday might exert a sudden influence on the market. The destruction of products by fire, however, will not be of sufficient importance to make any marked change in the situation. The feeling was stronger in a general way. Offerings were not very large, while the demand was fair and almost exclusively for August and September. Prices were slightly advanced, and the appreciation was moderately well supported. Receipts of products were fair and shipments were quite large. July lard started at 6.35, sold up to 6.47%, reacted and closed at 6.424. July ribs opened at 7.37% and sold up to

The British Grain Trade. LONDON, June 27.—The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: The continued drouth and the cold east wind have greatly reduced the chances of barley and oats. Wheat is in no need of rain. Trade was dull during the week. Prices were generally in favor of buyers. The sales of English wheat during the week were 26.816 quarters at 35s 1d per quarter, against 37.79 quarters at 31s id during the corresponding week last year. Foreign wheat is without feature and gives no confidence in present values, but the situa-tion of the world's wheat market is such as to give tion of the world's wheat market is such as to give buyers confidence of improvement in the near fu-ture. There were three arrivals off the coast, three sales and three cargoes remain. Today wheat was dull and in favor of buyers, English and Australian being a shilling easier. Country flour was scarce and steady, while most foreign brands were 6d cheaper. Maize was quiet. Barley was dull. Lin-seed was 3d lower.

The Colored Teachers Who Will Have Charge of the Schools.

MR. MAYER IS "AGAINST THE NIGGERS."

Mr. Blanchard Also Votes "No"-Mr. M. L. Brittain to Teach at the Boys' High School-Proceedings in Detail.

The board of education met yesterday evening to couclude the election of teachers. The business in hand was the report of the committee on the colored schools. When the tions for the first school were read Mr. Blanchard called for the reading of the white names, which it was intended to have elected on Saturday.

President Brown held that under the action of the board the white names were not eligible.

Mr. Blanchard insisted that he wanted an pportunity to vote for white teachers against

Mr. Mayer joined in a protest against the election of colored teachers. He wanted "no niggers" in Summer Hill school.

On motion of Mr. Glenn the committee's report, giving the names of black teachers, was adopted, the vote standing 7 to 2, the nays being Messrs. Blanchard and Mayer, Dr. Roach not voting. As the roll was being called Mr.

"I wish you would put me down right. I wish to vote against the niggers." It was then agreed that the yeas and nays be called, which resulted: Yeas-Brown, Cooper, Lowry, Hemphill, Henn, Moran, Roach, Beatie and Smith. Mr. Blanchard—"No!"

Mr. Mayer—"Against the niggers!"

Miss Clemmie Mayer was elected supernumerary of the Girls' High school.

A telegram was received by Superintendent Blaton from Mr. Brittain, accepting the position to which he was elected.

Mr. Brittain graduated in 1886 at Emory college with the highest honors of his class. He is the son of Rev. Mr. Brittain, of Covington, and has taught with great success in Sugar Valley during the past year. He is indorsed by Dr. Haygood, Hopkins, Callaway, Scomp and others. The board thinks it has cause for congratulation in having secured the services of this rising young gentleman.

THE HORSE GUARD.

An Enthusiastic Meeting, at Which the Camp Arrangements Are Settled, is Held.

An Enthusiastic Meeting, at Which the Camp Arrangements Are Settled, is Held.
Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock the Governor's Horse Guard held an enthusiastic meeting at its armory on North Broad street. A large attendance of members was present, and the greatest enthusiasm was manifested about the proposed trip to Salt Springs.

The Horse Guard finally and permanently decided that the troop would leave Atlanta on Saturday morning, July 16th, at 5 o'clock. Several members desired the time to be fixed at some hour in afternoon, but this plan was decided as less preferable, owing to the late hour the troop would arrive at the camp, preventing the men from making the many arrangements necessary to the comfort and convenience of a week's sojourn in camp.

In the matter of tents, Captain Milledge informed the company that arrangements had been made to secure tents from Macon and Montgomery in case the government tents did not arrive in time; but he was sanguine that the tents that would be issued to Georgia would arrive in ample time to permit the Guard to receive its quota. The commissary and quartermaster made satisfactory and comforting reports concerning the arrangements at Salt Springs. The troop will leave Atlanta at five o'clock promptly on the morning of the 16th and ride in a liesurely manner to the Springs. The troopers will get breakfast in this city before leaving, and will not stop on the way, as at one time decided. Salt Springs will be reached about half past ten, and the men wil limmediately perfect all arrangements, after which strict military discipline will prevail during the entire time of the encampment.

The confederate veterans of Douglasvillo will have a barbeone and celebration during the stay of the Guard at Salt Springs, and have issued a pressing invitation to the command to join with them on that day. The invitation was accepted yesterday, and the members look forward to the occasion with considerable interest. The company received yesterday its new summer helmets, which were distributed among the men. The hats are white, very light, having a gold shield in front whereon the company's coat of arms is placed, and are arranged so that the ordinary plume can be attached to the hat. New sabre beits and fatigue caps of a very handsome description were also received and distributed.

The meeting yesterday afternoon was one of the received.

The meeting yesterday afternoon was one of the most enthusiastic and harmonious, as well as the most largely attended, the company has ever had. The encampment has aroused the greatest enthusiasm, and the men, old and young, are rallying about the colors, with all the hurrah of youth. New members are elected at every meeting, and the equipment of the company is being added to and perfected in very many details. The next meeting of the company will take place on the 4th of July, at which time a large number will parade in honor of the anniversary of the declaration of independence. The parade will take place at 4 o'clock, and as it is one of the four regular parades of the year, the members will turn out in full force.

STATE HOUSE LEGISLATION

The Cabinet Officers Will Generally Be Content With Existing Statutes. A CONSTITUTION representative made the rounds of the various state house departments yesterday, with a view of ascertaining what measures the various heads of departments would ask the legislature to pass, for the improvement and efficiency of their respective departments.

would ask the legislature to pass, for the improvement and efficiency of their respective departments.

As far as could be ascertained, Treasurer Hardeman, Secretary of State Barnett, Principal Keeper Towers, the attorney-general and the school commissioner will not ask the assembly to pass any laws for their benefit. Comptroller-General Wright will, in all probability, urge the passage of a bill which defines more clearly the duties of the insurance commissioner, which office he holds by virtue of his position as comptroller-general.

The nature of this bill was explained at some length in a recent issue of The Construtions, and is in fine what its caption intimates—angact to amend the existing act providing for the office of insurance commissioner, to define his powers and so forth. Comptroller Wright, in an interview not long ago, stated that the insurance business of the state had grown to such an extent as to justify the insurance commissioner to be made into a separate office, distinct and apart from the comptroller-general. The act pending, or the one that will be introduced, does not contemplate the separation of the two offices, but simply more clearly defines the comptroller-general's powers as commissioner of insurance.

The insurance men of the city, and of the stete, so far as an expression of opinion has been had, regard Comptroller Wright as an ad-

The insurance men of the city, and of the stete, so far as an expression of opinion has been had, regard Comptroller Wright as an admirable officer, and the agents speak of him in most complimentary terms. But the propsition has been made, and indorsed by quite a number, that the insurance business at present demands the presence of an officer, whose whole time and attention shall be given to the matter. As before stated, Captain Wright regards the scheme with favor.

Colonel Towers, the principal keeper, stated that there was one bill now pending before the legislature in regard to the convict question. Mr. Huff's bill, as it is generally called, is the one alluded to. This bill was not prepared by the penitentiary officers, but is the embodiment of the views of Mr. Huff, one of the members from Bibb county, upon the subject. Colonel Towers and Mr. Shubrick, both stated yesterday, that the bill contained some excel-Colonel Towers and Mr. Shubrick, both stated yesterday, that the bill contained some excellent features which they were inclined to favor, but they were not prepared to say that they fully and entirelyindorsed the suggestion. There are features, in fact, they did 'not approve. Mr. Bray, of Fulton, has a bill pending that relates to the provision of future convicts, but has no reference to those already confine! Colonel Towers stated that he sincerely hoped the legislature would pass an act looking towards the improvement of the county jails throughout the state. In his last report to the governor he had touched upon the coning towards the improvement of the county jails throughout the state. In his last report to the governor he had touched upon the condition of the jails, and had premised his remarks by calling the governor's attention "to one fruitful cause of diseases, and often even of deaths, in the penitentiary." In his report he says: "I allude to jails, and especially to county jails. It is not an unfrequent thing for prisoners to be received from the county jails after heavy terms of confinement with their constitutions greatly impaired, and oftentimes completely wrecked. Several times during the present term convicts have been carried from the jails to the penitentiary hospitals where they swell the list of penitentiary sick, when, in fact, the seeds of the disease had been sown in some ill-ventilated jail." He then goes on in his report to give facts and figures taken from the books of the different camp physicians. Colonel Towers stated that the governor would allude to the evil in his message to the legislature, and urge upon that body the importance of floing what seemed to be necessary and urgent in the matter.

Commissioner Henderson stated that on several occasions, he and his officers had urged the necessity of passing several bills relating to his department, but that the legislature had never regarded them with favor. He had concluded to make the best of existing laws, and do everything that was possible towards benefitting the agricultural interests with his present powers.

to Consult a Tonsorial Artist.

Chris McNamara is a commercial tourist, extensively and favorably known through Georgia. When he places his autograph on a hotel register he writes New York behind it, and it is upon that city he draws all his sight drafts when his purse grows lean. On the road and among the boys he is known as "Christian Mack."

Vertester Mack was in town.

"Christian Mack."
Yesterday Mack was in town.
For a month past he has been off the road enjoying a rest at Indian Springs, a watering place forty miles from the nearest cemetery. Since first going to the springs he has remained there until yesterday morning, when he came to Atlanta to pass the day and get shaved. During the afternoon Mack posed in front of the Kimball and received his friends. In a short time he was the center of a large crowd, and to a general inquiry as to whese he had been Mack answered:
"Down to Indian Springs, the greatest place in the world for a sick man."

"Then, why didn't you stay there? You look like an invalid," remarked some one sizlook fixe an invalid, "remarked some one sizing up the drummer's large frame.
"Oh, don't be uneasy. I'm going back tonight and stay a month. I just came up to get a shave."
"Came up to get a shave?"

get a shave."

"Came up to get a shave?"

"That's just the size of it. I came up to get a shave. I rode sixty miles for a shave and I got it. See? Why, that shave is a week under the skin. We have a barber down there, but he's an amateur yet, and I wanted one good shave. That's the grandest place in the world, and you boys had better come down."

"Having a good time?"

"Oh, yes, stacks of it. We have stacks of good water, stacks of pure air, stacks of good grub at the Elder house, and stacks of red and white chips. But there's my train; good-bye," and the happy New York drummer sized up and drew out.

ATLANTA WELL REPRESENTED. A Daughter of the Gate City Secures a Diplo-

A Daughter of the Gate City Secures a Diploma in New York.

Miss Maude D'Alvigny has just returned from New York, bringing with her a diploma from the convent of the Sacred Heart at Manhattanville. Miss D'Alvigny is a daughter of Dr. Charles D'Avigny, of Atlanta. And of the closing exercises the New York Herald of Wednesday says:

There was a liberal display of floral decorations in the large hall of the convent of the ladies of the Sacred Heart at Manhattanville yesterday afternoon on the occasion of their commencement exercises. It was a pretty picture the young ladies of the convent presented in their white Swiss costumes, even elegant in their simplicity. Archbishop Corrigan occupied a throne, about which lilles in pots were handsomely disposed, and as the archbishop looked about him and saw the smile of satisfaction on the faces of the graduates, his own face wore an equally glowing expression.

It was an interesting programme of exercises, opening with Rossini's overture to the "Siege of Corinth," excellently rendered by the Misses Hoby, Ray, D'Alvigny and Murray. Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers," by Miss O'Bierne, was sung in charming voice, and a pretty little operetta, "The Avalanche," was roundly applauded.

The premiums were presented to the blushing misses by Archbishop Corrigan, who also gave gold crosses to the graduates in token of the superiority of their literary achievements. To other voung ladies who had distinguished themselves in their studies during the year, badges of honor were distributed. Bishop Marlo, of Los Angeles, Cd., Father Murphy, president of the college of St. Francis Xavier, and Bishop John J. Conroy, of Curium, were among the spectators.

A Young Man's Serious Accident and His Mother's Death.

Lee McGinty, a seventeen-year-old son of Mrs. James McGinty, who resides at No. 126 Walker street, met with an accident on last Saturday which has left him in a serious condition. He fell and broke his leg and was otherwise injured. Dr. Dan Howell did all he could for him. The young man is bright and industrious and has been the stay and support of the family.

Yesterday morning, while he was lying upon his bed of suffering, his mother died. She had been ill a long time with consumption. Her husband is lying very sick with the same disease. At 11:39 the funeral of the mother took place at the residence, and the body was taken for interment to Oakland cemetery.

COURT AND CAPITOL.

News of Interest from the Various Departments.

NO DECISIONS YET IN PARDON CASES.

The Courts Grind On-Signal Officer O'Donnell Receives a Welcome Order—The Daily Gist in Justice's Courts.

The heads of the various state departments and their assistants are busy preparing for the coming session of the legislature, and there is little in the way of news to be obtained from them. The governor is considering several pardon matters and is devoting a portion of his time to the matter of the city solicitorship. The courts continue to dispense justice, a number of cases being disposed of daily.

The Governor and His Cabinet.

Governor Gordon has not taken any action as yet in the case of Isabella Rooney, the white woman confined at the Chattahoochee Brick Yard camp. The pressure upon the governor to pardon the unfortunate woman is very strong, and it is probable that he will do something to relieve her condition. It is said that the lessees of camp No. 3 are very anxious to get rid of the woman. She is intensely ignorant, and she is kept under lock and key in order that she may be protected against any improper assault. She is a white woman of a very low order of civilization, her dialect being that peculiar south Georgia style characteristic of the lower class of white people who live among the pine forests. The Woman's Christian Temperance union promise to look after the woman in the event of her freedom.

No action has been taken yet in the case of Henry Pope, the alleged rapist from Chattooga county. Judge Maddox presented the matter to the governor as strongly as it could be, and seems confident that executive clemency will be shown. A Constitution reporter interviewed the governor setting concerning the The Governor and His Cabinet.

The governor stated that he had been studying the question very closely, but had not arrived at any conclusion yet. He thought that he would decide the matter today or tomorrow, that everything depended upon the arrival of some papers he was expecting. The arrival of some papers he was expecting. Governor Gordon received, some days ago, a letter from a young lady in Flint Hill, Va., in which he was requested to send his photograph. The young lady declared that her name was "Virginia Gordon," that her parents called her so in honor of her native state and after the general, whose reputation parents called her so in honor of her native state and after the general, whose reputation in Virginia was widespread for bravery in bat-tle and kindness to his soldiers. The lady was born during the war, and was named about the time General Gordon was campaigning in Virginia. She stated that much interest had been manifested in his race for the gubernato-rial chair, and had she been able to have voted would certainly, have east her hallet for her rai chair, and had she been able to have voted would certainly have east her ballot for her namesake. She expressed the wish that the governor would have a long and prosperous reign and every personal blessing. The governor wrote her an autograph letter, and enclosed his photograph.

The Governor has granted the application for the charter made by the "Alabama Midland Railway company." The company is an Alabama corporation, but will traverse three counties in Georgia, and under the law will have to have a charter from this state. The corporators named are J. W. Woolfork, A. St. C. Tennille, O. C. Wiley, J. D. and J. K. Murphree. Fox Henderson, W. S. Coleman, Charles Henderson, Sigmond Roman, David Wiel, Joseph Morris. The road enters the state in Early county opposite the town of Gordon in Alabama, and runs through Early, Miller and Decatur counties to Bainbridge. The whole road will be about 175 miles in length, and will constitute a line between Montgomery and Bainbridge.

COMPTROLLER-GENERAL WRIGHT, on yesterday, received the following returns from insurance companies. The companies also paid their taxes: Equitable Life insurance company, of New York, taxes $1,560.28; Continental Fire insurance company, of New York, taxes, $380.72; Williamsburg City Fire insurance company, taxes, $365.01; Insurance Fire company of Philadelphia, taxes, $284.85. The enormous increase in the business of life insurance company in Caporia, is illustrated in enormous increase in the business of life insurance companies in Georgia is illustrated in the amount of taxes paid in the case of the "Equitable Life." In 1886 it paid only $538.81 worth of taxes; this year the amount is nearly three times as great, being $1,560.28. The "Equitable" ranks next to the "Southern Mutual insurance company," in doing the largest insurance business in the state. The table printed in Sunday's Constitution, showing the rank of the companies, was compiled before the returns of the "Equitable" arrived.

and statistics of commercial fertilizers and chemicals, inspected, analyzed and admitted to sale in Georgia during the season of 1886–87." The report shows the name of every brand, its composition, for whom, by whom, and where inspected. The list of fertilizers sold in Georgia is a very long one, and those engaged in the business make a list almost as lengthy. The report is a very valuable one, and will enable farmers to see exactly the per cent of the various ingredients contained in the different brands of fertilizers used by them. The comparative tables showing the sales for the different years is a very interesting study. Those who desire the report can obtain one by application at the department of agriculture.

The Receipts and Expenditures incident to the inspection of fertilizers for the past season are as follows: 106,078.08 tons have been inspected during the season, the fees amounting to $83,039.01. The expenses have consisted of tags, express charges, telegrams, drayage, stationery, traveling expenses, all of which amounted to $4,771.68, leaving a balance which was paid into the treasury of $78,307.35. The salaries of inspectors amounted to $10,200,00, leaving a net balance of $68,107.35. This is the largest net balance ever paid into the treasury on this account save one, which occurred in the season of 1884-85, when it amounted to $70,183.75. The bureau of inspection is not only a vast benefit to the farmers, preventing worthless manures from being imposed on them, but is a source of considerable revenue to the state.

Colonel Samuel Barnett, of Washington, Ga., the chairman of the committee of arrangements and programme for the Inter-State Farmers' convention, was at the department of agriculture yesterday. Chairman Barnett declares that the outlook for the convention is most assuring, everything pointing to a large attendance and an interesting second. agriculture. The various states invited to co-operate in the convention are manifesting considerable enthusiasm, and promise large and representative delegations. A DIVORCE SUIT was filed yesterday morning in the office of the clerk of the superior court. The petitioner is Celia Perkins, and the respondent is George Perkins. The petitioner alleges that she was married to the respondent in April, 1874, at Jonesboro, Ga. They lived together as man and wife until March, 1881, when her husband beat her cruelly and then deserted her, since which time the two have not lived together. Messrs. Speairs and Baker represent the petitioner.

JUDGE MARSHALL J. CLARKE, of the superior court, sat in chambers for several hours yesterday hearing motions for new trials. Today there will be a call of the certiorari docket. All the jury cases have been deferred until next, September, and the jurors have been dismissed until that time.

IN JUDGE RICHARD H. CLARK's court only two cases were tried yesterday. J. Whitsett, the young man who, it is alleged, used the telephone to defraud a number of Atlanta merchants, was arraigned on the charge of forgery. The indictment specified that he signed the names of J. C. Payne and Mr. Rhode Hill to orders on Mr. Catlton. The defendant pleaded "not guilty." His mother and sister sat by his side, and his lawyers, Messrs. Manning & Sibly, were near him. A number of witnesses were examined for the prosecution, whose testimony fixed the crime upon the accused. The theory of the defense was that Whitsett committed the acts laid to his charge, but that being insane he was irresponsible for his actions. Captain John Keely testified that he was a victim of the defendant's rascality, and at first he was much incensed. When, however, he visited the defendant at the station house and saw his real condition, his indignation was turned into pity, for he believed the prisoner to be of unsound mind. Miss Annie Corley was a witness for the defense. She stated that she had formerly been engaged to the prisoner at the bar, but his behavior was so stupid that she was forced to discard him. She was firmly convinced of his insanity. Others expressed the same opinion. In their arguments to the jury the lawyers for the defense elaborated this hypothesis and asked for a verdict of acquittal on this ground. Solicitor-General Hill took issue with the attorneys on the other side. He insisted that the prisoner at the bar was a rational being; that he was an unusually bright and vigorous young man; that the insanity dodge would not work: that there was entirely too much method

The Customhouse. Assistant O'Donnell, of the signal service office, is feeling better than he has for some days. A week or so ago he received an order of transfer to the office at Key West, Fla. The prevalence of yellow fever at Key West made the prospect of such transfer an anything but pleasant one. Mr. O'Donnell's friends were naturally indignant at what they deemed an unwarranted action on the part of somebody among the "powers that be," and a protest was made against the change. On yesterday Mr. O'Donnell received a letter from Washington in which it was stated that the chief signal officer did not desire to send him to Key West until danger from fever was past, and that in Assistant O'Donnell, of the signal service until danger from fever was past, and that in the mean time his services would be valuable at Jacksonville or Cedar Keys.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS. The Commission Will Assemble This Morning at Nine O'Clock.

The members of the railroad commission will meet this morning at the usual hour at the rooms of the commission in The Constitution building. Commissioners Erwin and Traumell arrived in the city yesterday afternoon for the purpose of attending the session.

The only thing before the body is the preparation of its semi-annual report to the governor. The commissioners at the meeting last week devoted considerable time to the consideration of the matter, and in a great measure decided upon what subjects would be incorporated and mentioned. The work of the commission is necessarily abridged, as shown in the semi-annual reports, as the publication in the semi-annual reports, as the publication of the entire proceedings would make a very bulky volume. The report will contain some very valuable information, and will be well worth preserving. very valuable may worth preserving.

well established that consumption if attended to in its first stages, can be cured. There is, however, no true and rational way to cure this discase, which is really scrofulous ulceration of the lungs, except through purifying the blood. A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Yesterday morning an accident happened in the milling works of Messrs. A. A.; DeLoach & Co., which will probably result in the death of Mr. Melville, an estimable man and skilled of Mr. Melville, an estimable man and skilled mechanic.

Last Saturday, Mr. Melville, who had been running a machine shop in Chattanooga, came to Atlanta to accept a place in DeLoach's manufactory. He went to work yesterday morning at seven o'clock. Being a finished workman, he was entrusted with the manipulation of the turning lathe. About nine o'clock, while doing some delicate wood work, the lathe in some inexplicable manner slipped and turned. Just how it happened none of the workmen sould say, but the sharp tool struck Melville in the stomach and penetrated his bowels. He bled copiously and suffered intense pain.

Drs. Westmoreland and Howell were summoned and soon arrived. Owing to the peculiar character of Melville's injuries they could not ascertain exactly their extent. They saw at a glance, however, that the injured man's condition was decidedly critical, and they could only wait and watch for developments.

Mr. Melville's family has been telegraphed for, and will arrive this morning. The accident cast a gloom over the entire establishment, and there was little work done during the rest of the day.

At a late hour last night the injured man was suffering a great deal. The chances are decidedly against his recovery.

A Well Informed Man Has Something to Say About it.

Mr. J. Weir Jeffers, the agent of A. G. Mc-Campbell & Co., grain and provision brokers, of Chicago, who came here for the purpose of establishing a bucket shop to succeed the one operated by Mr. Phelan, was seen yesterday afternoon by a Constitution reporter, and talked interestingly about the late panic in the grain market. Said he:

"The cause of the wonderful fluctuations in grain was the action of cliques in many of the cities, who pooled their money to run up the price of wheat. They failed in their scheme because they did not have enough ready money. Had they possessed money enough to keep up the price by purchasing all the wheat that was offered their success would have made millions of dollars. As it was, they threw into the breech nearly a million, but that wasn't a drop in the bucket. It would have taken five or six millions to have kept up the prices at all the places where the cliques were operating. That is the long and short of it. It explains the whole thing in a nutshell.

"What does your house propose to do with regard to the bucket shop in Atlanta?"

"That I canhot say, for I have had no advices from them. I shall remain here for some days to hear what their plans are. Generally we have been welcomed into cities. We have never had to force our way. Of course, we shall not kick against public opinion."

A Pair of Ribbon Handcuffs—A Negro Wo-man and Her Trunk—A Prohibition Case—Other Police Pickings.

A six-year-old negro boy, less than three feet tall, weighing about forty-five pounds, walked into police headquarters yesterday. Alongside the small moke walked Patrolman Moss, who stands six feet three and a half in his socks. The boy's hands were folded over the lower button on his vest and were securely tied with a piece of broad yellow ribbon. The ribbon was long enough to reach up to the patrolman and answered the double use of a handcuff and Patrolman Moss to investigate the matter, and during the afternoon he came upon a crowd of boys charging the flock of geese. The patrolman made a dive for the boys and caught one—the smallest one of the gang.

At the city prison the boy gave his name as Ben Littlejohn, and after much persuasion furnished the officers with the names of the boys who were with him. Members of the mounted squad called at the homes of the missing boys, but so far they have not been arrested.

his trate od; but still Hester appears to have bad luck.

Something over a year ago he became involved in a trouble with anothor negro and shot him. At first it looked as though Hester had acted in self-defense, but later on appearances changed and Hester was presented to the city court. When the case against him was called the darky who had been shot failed to appear, and for a time Hester's friends thought the case would be nolle prossed. This was not done, however, and notwithstanding the absence of the negro, Hester was fined. When he was arrested last week at the instance of his wife, because of his daughter's d. appearance, he was held a short time and released. His release did not produce the missing girl and yesterday the mother time and released. His release did not produce the missing girl and yesterday the mother went before a justice and swore out a warrant, charging him with fornication and adultery. It was this warrant which caused him to occupy a cell at the city prison yesterday. Hester gave bond last night and was released.

She Is Wanted in LaGrange.

Early yesterday morning Captain Couch, acting chief of police, received a telegram from the marshal at LaGrange, asking him to arr st a negro woman named Mattie Gilmore, at detain with her a large trunk for which held the cheek. The train upon which the anna reached the city had arrived when the ulegram was received, and members of the department were furnished with a description, and were instructed to watch out for her. Patrohnan Baker was specially detailed to search for the woman. At watch out it is in the control of the woman. At the union baggage room the patrolman secured a clue, and calling at a house on Calhoun street, found two negro women sitting on the

"Oh, I gness you are mistaken," was the officer's reply.
"No, I ain't," said the woman, tartly. "My Feeling certain that the woman was misrepresenting things, Patrolman Baker returned to police headquarters and reported the facts to Acting Chief Couch. Soon after the patrolman left the house, Officers Harris and Haynes, of the mounted squad, who were on the same trail, rode up. The women were still sitting on the porch, and to the officers' inquiries again denied knowing anything about Mattie Gilmore.

The officers then decided to search the house, and in doing so came across the trunk asked for in the telegram. This convinced them that Mattie Gilmore was about the place and finally one of the two women admitted that she was known by that name. As soon as she made the admission she was arrested, and together with the trunk, was conducted to the city prison. After the woman was locked up, a telegram was sent to the LaGrange marshal, notifying him of her arrest—and asking for instructions. Later in the evening acting Chief Couch received a telegram, directing him to hold the woman and the trunk. It is a large traveling Trunk and is very heavy. The woman declines to talk further, than to express great indignatin at her arrest.

Marietta street, are again in the same hole.

Both men are charged with selling liquor.

Several weeks ago cases were made against the men, and when they were arraigned for trial the evidence adduced was sufficient to induce Judge Anderson to impose a fine and to bind both over to the city court. On the trial both men denied most positively that the law had been violated in their place.

Several days ago Acting Chief Couch was informed that liquor was again being sold at Hollingsworth's place. He at once detailed Patrolman Cason to investigate the matter. On Saturday night the patrolman secreted himself near the wineroom, and before midnight secured enough evidence, in his opinion, to warrant a case. The case, however, could not be made until the city attorney was consulted. Early yesterday morning the patrolman laid his information before Judge Pendleton who ordered the cases to be made, but when the officers went to the wine room to arrest the men the doors were closed and the windows curtained. Mitchell was found later in the day and locited up. Hollingsworth, however, has not yet been found and the efficers think he has skipped. His friends, however, assert that he has not, and that he will be on hand when the case is called. Cases were booked against both men. Mitchell was unable to give bond. Both defindants again deny the truth of the charge, but Patrolman Cason says he will be able to prove that liquor was sold at the place on Saturday night.

Some of Different Sorts.

George Bankston, a negro well known in police circles, was fined twenty dollars and est by Judge Anderson during the session of police court yesterday. Bankston was arraigned in court charged with disorderly conduct. The evidence showed that he had gone home quite drunk Saturday night and had given his wife a terrible beating because his supper was not ready for him.

Mrs. F. J. Cooledge, in getting out of her carriage in front of High's store, dropped a package. A negro girl snatched up the handle and hurried away, notwithstanding the calls which followed. The matter was reported at police headquarters, but the girl has not been apprenenced.

Charlie Allen, a negro suspect, and a set of buggy harness, were laid away at the city prison yesterday.

THE CITY SOLICITORSHIP. What the Several Candidates for the Position

What the Several Candidates for the Position are Doing.

Within the past few days, considerable activity has been developed in the matter of the solicitorship of the city court of Atlanta. The several applicants have been closeted with the governor, and the friends have held numerous conferences with reference to the matter. The influence of well known and influential persons is being invoked in the aid of the several candidates, and the outlook promises a warm and heated, as a well as a protracted contest.

Yesterday petitions were being circulated throughout the city in behalf of one or two applicants, and numerous signatures were obtained. The governor has given no indication as to what his determination will be, and at present the fight seems to be one man's struggle as much as another. The governor stated to a reporter the other day that no appointment would be made for several days. The candidates were very much worked up yesterday about something, but the most careful and diligent inquiry could not elicit the cause of the disturbance.

The Constitution, on Sunday, published a list of the applicants for the place and with are Doing.

THE CONSTITUTION, on Sunday, published a list of the applicants for the place, and unintentionally omitted the name of James A. Gray. Mr. Gray is a candidate, and has the hearty support of a large number of the best and most influential citizens of Atlanta, and of the state.

of the state.

This correction is made because of the petitions being circulated in his behalf, and because many of Mr. Gray's strong personal friends being unadvised of his candidacy may be induced to ask the appointment of some ther gentleman.

The names of those applying for the office

The names of those applying for the office are well known to the people, and are strong and prominent members of the bar of the city. The office is a yery responsible one, requiring an alert, attentive and able attorney, and no doubt the governor in filling the place, will make his nomination with a view of choosing the best possible man for the place. It is stated that the solicitorship is worth at least five thousand dollars per year.

SAM FULTON'S FLY.

The Well Known Deputy Clerk Receives Postal Card Recalling Childhood Days. "That postal card recalls one of the most important events of my life; at least, I thought so about that time," said Mr. Sam Fulton, the well known deputy in the city clerk's office.

And as he spoke Mr. Fulton held high above his head a postal card. On one side was Mr. Fulton's name and on the other was written."

Mr. Fulton's name and on the other was written:

"Can you spell fly?"

The word 'fly' was printed in large letters—so large that they could have been distinguished by a blind man a mile off.

"Now," said Mr. Fulton, as he smiled upon the card, "that carries me back to the time when I was a boy of nine or ten years. It takes me back to a time when I never thought of gray hairs—when I—

"When you were not so fly as now?" remarked Oscar Hall, interrupting Mr. Fulton.

"Yes, I was just as fly then, and I'll prove it. One day I was in school sitting by the man who wrote this card—we were boys together—and I caught a fly in my hand. The teacher, saw me scoop my hand over the desk as I caught the fly, and as I was holding him up—the fly I mean—to look at him, the teacher called out:

"Did you catch a fly?"

called out:

"Did you catch a fly?"

"Yes, sir," I answered, olushing.

"Well, hold him," he said.

"I knew that teacher well—so did all the boys—and I knew that I had better hold that fly if I wanted peace. Well, I held him, and when my class was called up to recite that teacher made me hold that fly away above my head and spell fly. You bet I spelled the word too before I let him go"

"And what has that card to do with it?"

"And what has that card to do with it?"
"Oh, nothing; only I haven't seen or heard of the man who wrote it since the day he heard me spell fly until I got this card today. Somehow he learned where I was and sent me this card. Those certainly were good days—but wait a second till I can issue this dog tag"—and the deputy clerk dropped the postal to sell a license for a dog to bite people.

NEW PHOSPHATE WORKS

Messrs. Maddox, Bucker & Co. Buy the Southern Phosphate Works.

Messrs. Maddex, Rucker & Co. have purchased the interest of Mr. D. P. Morris in the Southern Phosphate works, which gives them control. They will at once enlarge the works at a cost of about $25,000. This will enable them to make about five thousand tons of acid phosphate and ammoniated fertilizers of acid phosphate and ammoniated fertilizers next season. The original cost of the works was about $25,000. They are located on the Richmond and Danville railroad, a short dis-

Richmond and Danville railroad, a short distance above the shops of the company.

The phosphate and fertilizer business has become a very important industrial interest in Fulton county. The Gossypium Phospho company, the Pendleton Guano company, the Atlanta Guano company, the Furman Farm Improvement company, the Colquitt Chemical company, are among the best known works, employing, perhaps, a million dollars of capital and supplying fertilizers to every southern state. The Southern Phosphate works, under the management of Messrs. Maddox, Rucker & Co., will be an important adjunct to this business.

Messrs. Maddox, Rucker & Co., will make this business auxiliary to their regular cotton and banking business which will be helped by their new venture. There were used in Georgia last year 166,000 tons of fertilizer, of which 94,000 tons were manufactured in the state. Next year the local manufacture will exceed one hundred thousand tons. Of this amount Fulton county manufactures nearly 70,000 tons. The oil mills now running on the Georgia road, supply cotton seed meal in immense quantities. The new oil mill being built on the Central railroad will add to the supply of cotton seed meal so as to fill the local demand. Ten years ago Fulton county was drained annually of thousands of dollars paid for fertilizers. The county now sells more tham a million dollars worth of fertilizers in excess of what it purchases for its own use from outside parties.

Cut With a Long, Ugly Pocket Knife.

ALMOST A FATAL SATURDAY SPREE

Will Mills Calls at the Winercoms, Gets Full and Starts Out—He Succeeds in Cut-ting His Brother's Throat.

Will Mills and George Mills are brothers, sons of an aged widow, residing in the western portion of the city. Saturday night Will Mills cut his brother's throat, but the affair was kept quiet until yes-terday morning, when the facts became known during the session of police court.

The two brothers are hard working boys, and each week contribute to the support of the family. Usually they are quiet and live together peaceably, quietly and are happy. Un-fortunately for both the boys and the entire family, Will Mills is not a total abstainer, and the trouble in which he now finds himself was due to that fact due to that fact.

Saturday night last he made a visit to some of the winerooms on Marietta street, and towards midnight found himself slightly off. While he was roaming aimlessly about George Mills and a friend came upon him, and at once began trying to get him home. The "prohi" he had been drinking was not at all of a domestic character, and he declined to go home. The brother insisted, and finally Will Mills became angry, and, jerking out his pen-knife, began skin and veins until it came out about four inches below. The wound was an ugly one and bled profusely, but with the fortitude of a warrior the brother stood the punishment without seeking revenge. The noise, however, made by Will Mills, attracted the attention of Patrolmen Cason and Hadley, who were in the neighborhood. They hurried to the scene and finding one man quite bloody and another with an open knife in hand, placed both under arrest in order to prevent further trouble. The wounded man then began explaining the situation and in doing so not only asserted that he was not hurt, but declared that the wound was the

The patrolmen, after investigating the matter carefully, decided to release George Mills, and to enter a city case against Will Mills. He was booked for disorderly conduct, and the caseagainst him was called during the session of police court yesterday morning. The evidence did not show that the wound was the result of an accident, but it showed that an attempt upon the injured man's life had been made. Judge Anderson, after hearing the evidence, decided that the prisoner ought to pay the city three dollars for being disorderly, and that he ought to give a two hundred dollar bond to the city court for stabbing.

At the time Judge Anderson rendered his decision, Mills had no friends in the court room and was compelled to submit to a lock and key. Later in the day his aged mother appeared at police headquarters and paid the fine. At the same time she made the bond for two hundred dollars and secured her son's release.
